3.4 Terminating antidepressant medication

» Consider stopping antidepressant medication when the person (a) has no or minimal depressive symptoms for 9–12 months and (b) has been able to carry out routine activities for that time period.

» Terminate contact as follows:

- In advance, discuss with person the ending of the treatment.
- For TCAs and most SSRIs (but faster for fluoxetine). Reduce doses gradually over at least a 4-week period; some people may require longer period.
- Remind the person about the possibility of discontinuation/withdrawal symptoms on stopping or reducing the dose, and that these symptoms are usually mild and self-limiting but can occasionally be severe, particularly if the medication is stopped abruptly.
- Advise about early symptoms of relapse (e.g. alteration in sleep or appetite for more than 3 days) and when to come for routine follow-up.
- Repeat psychoeducation messages, as relevant. » DEP 2.1

» Monitor and manage antidepressant withdrawal

- symptoms (common: dizziness, tingling, anxiety, irritability, fatigue, headache, nausea, sleep problems)
- Mild withdrawal symptoms: reassure the person and monitor symptoms.
  - Severe withdrawal symptoms: reintroduce the antidepressant at the effective dose and reduce more gradually.
  - CONSULT A SPECIALIST if significant discontinuation/withdrawal symptoms persist.

» Monitor re-emerging depression symptoms during

- withdrawal of antidepressant: prescribe the same antidepressant at the previous effective dose for another 12 months if symptoms re-emerge.
